THE ANTHONY'S WILL GO TO SCOTLAND

The Democrat-Forum has just received notice from Dr. F. R. Anthony that he and Mrs. Anthony will leave Vienna early in January for Glasgow, Scotland, where he will follow the clinical work in the Royal Infirmary for several weeks. He orders The Democrat-Forum changed to their address in Glasgow.

They are spending the Christmas holidays visiting the cities of Northern Germany and Holland. Their stay in Austria has been very pleasant, notwithstanding the fact they are surrounded by a great city of people whose language and manners are so different from their own. They are now beginning to feel that the good old broad Scotch-English they will soon enjoy will seem like home, after laboring with the German. They expect to arrive in Maryville some time in April.

To Leave for Texas.

Oliver Bovard will leave about January 10 for Port Arthur, Texas, where he intends to locate. He has a sister at that place, Mrs. M. H. Moffit. Mr. Bovard's many friends wish him luck in his new home.

DIES AT AGE OF 85

L. W. ARNOLD PASSED AWAY SATURDAY MORNING.

AN OLD RESIDENT OF CITY

Funeral Services to be Held on Sunday Afternoon at the Home, at 2:30 O'Clock.

Louis W. Arnold, the aged father of Mrs. Martin A. Lewis of North Main street, died Saturday morning as the result of a stroke of paralysis he suffered on Thursday morning at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Emery Alry.

Mr. Arnold arose Thursday morning in his usual health, which was good for a man over 80 years of age. He went to the breakfast table and was preparing to eat, when he fell unconscious from his chair. A physician was summoned and it was apparent from the first that he could live only a few hours. He did not regain consciousness and received a second stroke within an hour after the first came on.

The funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his late home, on North Main street, where he had lived for nearly forty-one years. They will be conducted by Dr. C. P. Luce of the First Presbyterian church.

Mr. Arnold became a member of the Adventist church in his young manhood, and as there was no church of that faith here, he attended all of the churches of our city with equal regularity, but did not affiliate as a member with any of them.

Mr. Arnold was born May 19, 1825, at Dixmont Corner, Me., and was one of a family of eight children, all of whom lived to be over 80 years of age. Two brothers and two sisters survive—John Arnold of Elmira, Minn.; Wesley Arnold of Simpson Corners, Me.; Phoebe Getchel of Falland, N. D. and Rhoda Howe of Bellingham, Minn.

He was married May 25, 1847, to Mary Fletcher. Eight children, two girls and six boys, were born to them, four of whom are living, four having died in infancy. Those surviving are James L. Arnold of Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Charles P. Arnold of Kansas City; J. L. Arnold of Pierre, S. D.; and Mrs. Martin A. Lewis of Maryville.

Mr. Arnold engaged in the lumber business in his native state of Maine, and later in Canada. He came to Maryville forty-one years ago this coming March, and had lived in the house in which he died all that time. Mrs. Arnold died several years ago.

Mrs. Craig will stop in Kansas City for several days at her son's home, before joining Mr. Craig in Jefferson City, where she will remain until the close of the legislature.

POLITICS IN OHIO.

A remarkable state of affairs has been developed in Ohio politics. Some who recently started a bribery investigation in Adams county and the results have exceeded the most sanguine expectations. After the officials got their probe in under the political cuticle the patriots have been falling over each other to plead guilty.

More than a thousand indictments have been returned by the grand jury and plenty of material is still on hand. Matters were carried with such a high hand that few are willing to deny that they were frugal enough to realize something tangible on their elective franchise. They have learned that franchises are valuable and they didn't propose to overlook their hand. There seems to be more pride among the accused, and these constitute 70 per cent of the population of the county, in having been bought twice than in not having been bought at all.

One old lady pleaded guilty to having sold her son's vote for five dollars, and one man admitted having sold his vote three times. From the Republicans he received $12.50 for voting the ticket straight, from the Democrats he got $10 for voting the straight Democratic ticket, and as a final triumph of financial acumen he got three dollars for his vote for an individual candidate. One young man sold out to his father for $10, and two ministers are under indictment charged with receiving $5 each. The judge has adopted the plan of fining the offenders five and ten dollars each. He also penalizes them with a jail sentence which is stayed on good behavior. To send all to jail would depopulate the county.

The ghost of Mark Hanna still walks. This remarkable condition of public morals is the legitimate outgrowth of the commercialization of politics inaugurated by Hanna and Boss Cox. It is a sentiment that flourishes in a boss-ridden, trust-ridden country as readily as malaria in the swamps.

Nothing short of an aroused public conscience induced by publicity can check this poisonous growth that, unchecked, eventually means the surrender of popular government. Such a condition is a painful but only too true commentary on the frailties of individual liberty and the insidious influences of commercialism. It is none the less regrettable that it is found in so shameless a degree in a state that has produced so many presidents.

UNUSUAL WOMEN

Wellesley College Graduate a Policewoman In California—Ordinary Riding Has No Attractions For Mrs. Thompson.

A WELLESLEY college graduate, Miss Fannie Bixby, has been appointed special policeman of her native town, Long Beach, Cal.

Helping wayward boys and girls is her chosen occupation, and she takes up their cases in a plain little office in a downtown building, which is her headquarters.

Miss Bixby is the child of rich parents, but is a firm believer in the doctrines of Tolstoy and lives her life according to his teachings. Besides the time spent at Wellesley studying social economics, she spent one year at the Civic Service House, in the Russian-Jewish quarters of Boston. She also lived in the Nurses' Settlement House in San Francisco.

A Titled Skating Enthusiast.

The Vicomtesse Benoist d'Azy has started the all smart set of Washington roller skating. She is the head of the Washington Skating club, which has for members many of the feminine members of the diplomatic set, including Baroness Elizabeth Rosen, maid of honor to their majesties of Russia.

These aristocratic women are very enthusiastic about the sport.

An Eccentric Horsewoman.

For daring and originality no horsewoman can equal Mrs. Thompson, who thinks nothing of riding down flights of stairs, hanging head downward from her horse's neck while he stands on his hind legs on a pedestal and performing other wild feats. She

The Secret of Jane Hading's
Beautiful Eyes.

Jane Hading has the most beautiful eyes of any woman on the French stage. They are extraordinarily long and it is said that her father practiced upon them the surgical operation common in Turkey.

The Turks have a way of lengthening the eyes by cutting the corners. This is done very early, at the age of two or three years, the outer corner being deftly slit with a lancet about the twelfth part of an inch. While the wound is healing the lids are drawn outward every day, and when it is quite cured the eye is still submitted daily to the drawing process for a considerable time, with the result that it becomes long and narrow.

Known by Her Perfume.

Mrs. Charles de Lonsay Oerlichs has discovered a Japanese perfume so distinctive that her friends declare they can trace her by it. Her automobile, her carriage, her gowns and every thing she uses is scented with it.

DIFFERING OPINIONS.

The Quartermaster Was More Liberal Than the Admiral.

If Sam Bernard is to be believed one of the most common sins to which a frail humanity is prone is that of believing the worst in any given case. "There's my friend Jones," said Bernard. "I met Jones waddling up Broadway the other night. Just before I got to him Jones sought the comparative shelter of a lamppost. He

"Greeley? Greeley?" said Artemus. "Horace Greeley? Who is he?"

The man was quiet about five minutes. Pretty soon he said: "George Francis Train is kicking up a good deal of a row over in England. Do you think they will put him in a bastille?"

"Train? Train? George Francis Train?" said Artemus solemnly. "I never heard of him."

This ignorance kept the man quiet for about fifteen minutes; then he said: "What do you think about General Grant's chances for the presidency? Do you think they will run him?"

"Grant? Grant? Hang it, man," said Artemus, "you appear to know more strangers than any man I ever saw!"

The man was furious. He walked up the bar, but at last came back and said, "You confounded ignoramus, did you ever hear of Adam?"

Artemus looked up and said, "What was his other name?"

Humanity.

Of all the graces of the mind and heart, Nature's best gift or excellence of art. Higher than all—man's divinest part—

Is sweet humanity.

Blessings upon the man whose forehead wears.

The seal of tenderness to hoary hairs, God's imprint! 'Tis a blessed fate who cares.

For sweet humanity.

Chaplet of flowers immortal for the friend who loves his servant, horse and would defend.

A dog would spare oppression and misery lend.

For sweet humanity.

O bond of all religions, new and old.

Divine beneficence that can entice.

All living things, whatever be the mold.

In sweet humanity.

The Weird Excuse.

Mrs. Parkison of one of the main line suburbs met Mrs. Brown at a social function the other afternoon and in the course of their talk told her this story on Mr. Parkison:

"Don't you know, Frederick did a very peculiar thing the other night. He came home from the club rather late, and of course I had retired. I didn't hear him go to bed, but some time during the night I heard a noise in the room. I awoke and was startled to trace the noise by sound to the door under the bed. I was so frightened I screamed."

"Just then Frederick poked his head out from under the bed.

"What's wrong?" he asked.

"What on earth are you doing there?" I asked in return.

"I must have been dreaming," he explained, "dreaming that I was fixing the blamed automobile." Wasn't that funny?"

"Very," replied Mrs. Brown. "That was the night Mr. Brown and Mr. Parkison went to the theater together. Mr. Brown came home late, too, and went to sleep standing up in the umbrella rack, but he didn't have any weird excuse."—Philadelphia Times.

An Important Postscript.

George Washington Prinsroe, thinking of matrimony and trembling on the edge, wrote to his married brother Rufus for advice.

"Dear Jawie," wrote Rufus in reply, "every man should marry. A wife is a man's greatest gift. She softens his troubles, dulls his jys and helps him every which way. The married life is the only life specially when you ts for chumate enuff for to git a jool of a wif like mine. P. S. Mandy has just stopt out. You blame ful you, STAY SINGLE."

Too Much Economy.

An eminent minstrel tells of a trip when he and a butter merchant of Philadelphia crossed the ocean on the same steamer. There were few passengers on board, and the musician was glad of the quiet, so that he could compose. Often he would sit down at a table by himself in the smoking room and busy himself for six or seven hours at a stretch with pen and manuscript paper. The butter dealer watched the musician's doings with great interest and one day tried to coax the musician to take a walk on deck. The musician declined courteously, offering the excuse that he had a great deal more music to write.

"But, my dear man," said the man of butter, "what are you doing that for? Economy is all right, but one must not go to extremes. Why don't you buy the pieces instead of copying them off this way? Music is so cheap nowadays!"

A Misunderstanding.

They were man and wife, says the Cleveland Leader. They were also trying to catch an East Cleveland car as it rounded the turn in front of the Williamson building.

She was the first to see what he took to be their car and started in hot pursuit. But her husband saw that 'twas a Shaker Lakes car and began to yell lustily, "Shaker Lakes!"

The woman seemed to run faster than ever instead of slowing down.

" Didn't you hear me tellin' you that was a Shaker Lakes car?" he inquired breathlessly and a bit grumpily.

She looked at him and gasped.

"I thought," she said, "that you were trying to get me to bury. It sounded as if you said, 'Shake your legs!'"

Artemus Ward was once making a railroad journey, dreading to be bored and feeling miserable, when a man approached him, sat down and said, "Did you hear the last thing on Horace Greeley?"

"Greeley? Greeley?" said Artemus.

"Horace Greeley? Who is he?"

The man was quiet about five minutes. Pretty soon he said: "George Francis Train is kicking up a good deal of a row over in England. Do you think they will put him in a bastille?"

The Combination.

Old Daniel Drew was at his house on Union square, New York, one day when his clerks sent up for the combination of the safe which they wanted to open. Drew said it was "door." They sent again, saying it was a five letter combination and they couldn't make "door" go. Finally Drew went down. "When I took the thing in hand," he said, "the safe opened as easy as anything. I turned to them. There," says I, "it opens as easy as an old sack. Just do-a-ge!"

The Little Joke.

A Denver doctor who insists on joking once in a while noticed some scales of a new pattern in a shop window. Over them was a sign which read:

"Weigh your supplies yourself at home. The scales will pay for themselves. Price $1."

The doctor went into the shop, examined the scales and decided to try them. He had one wrapped up and started away with it.

"Oh, by the way," said the shopkeeper, "did you want to pay for that, or shall I charge it?"

"The sign says they'll pay for themselves," replied the doctor. "Now, if this one doesn't let me know and we'll have it arrested."

And then he went out and just laughed and laughed. Denver Times.

JOHN FURLONG DIED

SATURDAY MORNING

John Furlong, a well known farmer living near Bedison, died early Saturday morning at his home while sitting in his chair. It is not known at what time he died, as he was found dead in his chair by his son, Edgar Furlong, when he got up to build the fire. His body was still warm, which proved that life had not long been extinct.

Mr. Furlong's daughters, Misses Anna and Edna, aged about 16 and 12 years respectively, remember to have heard a call early in the morning, which they now think was their father, but the call was not sufficient to arouse them from sleep.

Mr. Furlong was about 60 years old.

He was subject to spells with his heart, and had not been well since his return a month ago from South Dakota, where he went to look after some government land he secured at the last land drawing. He had a sick spell while he was gone.

Arrangements for the funeral had not yet been made at the time of going to press.

Mr. Furlong's wife died several years ago. He is survived by his two

KNITTED JACKET AND SCARF FOR SKATING: PRETTY ERMINE SET FOR YOUNG GIRL

NOTICE the jacket on the skating girl in the picture. It isn't fur, although it looks like it. It is one of the new knitted skating jackets that are useful on other occasions as well as when one is skating on runners over the frozen lake or river. The kind of wool generally used for these jackets is the Shetland, which gives a furlike effect with its dark markings. The muffler thrown around the neck of the young lady in fur scarf style is also knitted of wool to match the jacket. Fringed ends are liked for these mufflers. The short plaited skirt, manish boots and jaunty tam-o'-shanter cap complete a skating costume that is both smart and practical.

The other half of the picture is taken up by a pretty ermine set—muff, scarf and toque. Ermee has recovered all or nearly all of its old time popularity. The necklace with its silk bow edged with dark fur is especially fetching. The hat, which goes well with the ermine, is faced with the ever present black velvet.

FRANCES WARD.

STUNNING SUIT IN STRIPED VELVET

VELVET to the right of us, velvet to the left of us, plain, striped and spotted. That's the keynote of the season. Here's a charming suit of black and white striped velvet trimmed with deep sailor collar, skirt band and cuffs of black velvet. The lines are exceedingly graceful, and the suit is a stunning one for the woman with the carriage and figure needed to give to it the full effect. With it come a picturesquely big hat, also mainly of velvet, and a lace necklace, which relieve the blackness of the deep collar and the hat.

LITTLE HOUSE KEEPING HINTS.

When sewing spread a dust sheet on the floor to catch the cut pieces. They are difficult to get off the carpet, and the sheet can easily be lifted and shaken.

Cloudy mirrors should never be seen in a house. Rub them with a cloth wrung out of cold water and dipped in dry whitening and then polish them with a dry duster.

If only the white of an egg is needed, cover the yolk gently with a little cold water so as not to break it, and it will keep fresh several days.

Prunes are greatly improved by being stewed in a little elder.

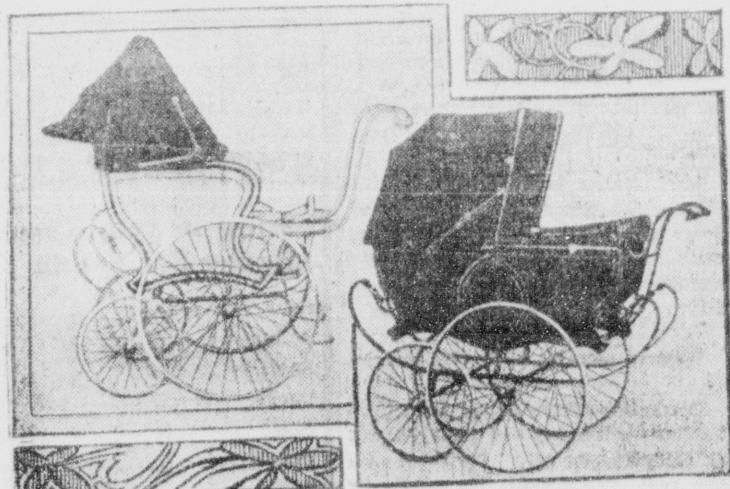

Lemon syrup is made by squeezing the juice of a lemon into a small cupful of water and boiling it with five lumps of sugar until it is thin and clear.

Grease marks on pages of books may be removed by sponging them with benzine, placing the pages between sheets of blotting paper and pressing with a warm iron.

BABY CARRIAGES COMING IN COLORS NOW

HERE'S the state chariot of his majesty King Baby. He comes in style now, with his carriage painted and adorned in (almost) all the colors of the rainbow. The manufacturers of these stylish perambulators have decided—wisely it seems, for the change has met with popular approval—to send out their wares in colors other than the somber black, dark blue, dark green and maroon which have prevailed for so many

TWO OF THE NEWEST PERAMBULATORS.

There are also slight modifications in shape, as can be seen in the accompanying picture, but the principal changes are in coloring. One of the prettiest of the new baby carriages is one of pale buttercup yellow, with black bands picking out the outer beveled edges and a very dark line of red on the outer panels.

FORGOT THE KEY.

Then the Locksmith Showed Him How to Open the Door.

When Mr. and Mrs. Eastend started out to spend the evening in pursuit of an engagement they paused on the front steps long enough for Mrs. E. to propound the usual query, "Have you got the key, dear?"

"Yes, I guess so," said Mr. E. "Wait a minute. No, I haven't, either. What do you think of that? Must have left it on the dresser."

"Well, here's a pretty how-de-do!" exclaimed Mrs. E. as her consort vaguely but fruitlessly rummaged his pockets. "How are we going to get in to get it?"

Hubby first tried the lower windows, to find them all carefully locked. Neighbors awoke to the situation and began to be helpful.

"Get a ladder," said one.

"Get a Jimmy," said another.

"Get an aeroplane," said a third. Various other expedients, ranging from derricks to dynamite, were suggested. Finally one neighbor brought a ladder which wouldn't reach the second story windows by six feet. It was suggested that the fire department be summoned. Rejected.

By this time the engagement had to be called off, and the remarks Mrs. E. was making to the female contingent of the assemblage will not here be recorded. As a last resort a locksmith was suggested, and Mr. E. departed in search of one. At the end of an hour he returned with a stolid looking German bearing an armful of tools.

"Vieh toot?" he inquired.

"This one," said Mrs. E., "and for goodness' sake don't Jimmy it nor dynamite it unless you have to!"

"Dot's all right," grunted the workman. Then he extended his hand and tried the knob. It turned. The catch had not caught. The door swung open. He turned and gave the assemblage an expressive glance.

And now when Mr. and Mrs. E. leave their little home of an evening some neighbor is sure to stick his head out of a window and kindly inquire, "Have you got the key?"—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

BLIND TO GOOD LUCK.

Fable of the Weary Farmer and the Golden Plow.

There was once a Benevolent Fairy who was accustomed to doing Good Deeds in Whimsical Ways. One day she was flying across the country to attend a meeting of the A. O. B. F. when she noticed a Farmer laboring in the Fields. His horse was Attenuated and Deceitful, and his plow was Heavy and Old Fashioned. Often he would pause and wipe the sweat from his brow. Plainly he was having a Hard Time.

The Benevolent Fairy watched him a moment and observed his Haggard Look and his general air of Misery. Suddenly an idea came to her—to make this man Rich, so that he would no longer have to toil and struggle to eke out a Bare Living. So she swooped down and touched the plow with her wand—she was, of course, invisible—and instantly it was changed to Solid Gold. Then with an amused but kindly backward glance the Benevolent Fairy went on her way.

A year later, remembering the occurrence, she flew over to see how the Farmer was enjoying his Good Fortune. She found him in the Fields, plowing laboriously, and if anything he and his surroundings looked Meaner and More Miserable than they had before. Much surprised, the Fairy flew closer, just in time to hear him murmur:

"I wish this ding-busted plow warn't so heavy!"

The Benevolent Fairy eyed him pityingly; then she once more touched the plow with her wand, and it again became a thing of wood and iron. Then she flew away, and the Farmer resumed his Toil.

After all, are there not some folk who would die of thirst adrift on a river?—Clifton B. Dowd in Lippincott's.

A DUEL IN UNDRESS.

Dueling, though not dead, was dying out even in Rogers' time and was not taken very seriously. The poet's biographer tells the quaint story of how Mr. Humphrey Howarth, a surgeon, when called out made his appearance in the field stark naked. The astonished challenger asked him what he meant. "I know," said Howarth, "that if any part of the clothing is carried into the body by a gunshot wound festering ensues, and therefore I have met you thus." His antagonist declared that fighting a man in puris naturalibus would be quite ridiculous, and accordingly they parted without further discussion.

Definite.

"Madam"—a census taker was speaking to her who answered his knock—"how many children over six and under twenty-one years of age have you?"

"Lemme see," she reflected; "leme see. Wait, sir, that be two over six an' two under twenty-one."—Everybody's.

Prepositions.

The Three Great Channels.
Every human being—man, woman and child, hero and convict, neurasthenic and deep sea fisherman, athlete and invalid—needs the blessing of God through three, and only three, great channels—responsibility, recreation and affection; work, play and love. With these any life is happy in spite of sorrow and pain, successful despite the bitterest failures. Without them a man breaks his heart, severs his conscious connection with God. If you want to keep a headstrong, fatuous youth from overreaching himself you try to give him responsibility, recreation and affection. If you want to put courage and aspiration into the gelatinous character of a street walker or the flickering mentality of a hysterical labor to furnish just the same trio—work, recreation and affection. In every case the healing power which you want to give is real life, and real life means just these three things. The same needs are fixed for all of us and the same all sufficing bounty in the supply if we can get and keep in touch with it—Atlanta.

Mice For Whooping Cough.

A fairly alarming relic of medieval nostrums came to my notice recently. A mother was discussing with her housekeeper the probability of her children taking whooping cough, which was then prevalent in the community. The housekeeper, a most dependable, valuable helper, of more than average good sense and judgment, said: “Mrs. Black, if you’ll let me I can keep your children from having whooping cough. I’ve kept lots of children from having it, but I wouldn’t do it without telling you first.”

“Well, Martha, what is it?”
“You catch a live mouse and kill it and dress it and stuff it and bake it and feed it to the children. It isn’t bad to take, and of course they don’t know what it is. That would spell the charm.”

To my friend’s exclamation of horror she replied with conviction, “I’ve given it to lots of children, and never one of them had whooping cough!”—Mary Newell Yount in Designer.

Last Revolutionary Survivor.
The last survivor of the Revolutionary war was John Gray, who died in Noble county, O., aged 104 years, on March 26, 1883. He came to the Buckeye State early in its existence. For some years before he died he drew an annual pension of $500 from the government. General John A. Bingham having got a special act through congress for this. Gray’s father was killed at the battle of Stillwater and he took his place in the army, being only sixteen years old then. He served through the remainder of the war. His military record is on file at the office of the state commissioner of soldiers’ claims.—Columbus Dispatch.

The Bull of Perilus.

Perillus of Athens is said to have invented for Phalaris, tyrant of Argos, 570 B. C., a brazen bull which opened on the side to admit victims who were to be roasted by the fire which was built underneath. The dying groans of the sufferers resembled closely the roaring of a mad bull. Phalaris greatly admired the invention and by way of test roasted the inventor first. Later the populace rose in rebellion and burned Phalaris.
